“ This might seem ridiculous and unbelievable but to honor this beautiful woman I'm posting it. I woke up from slumber this morning with a face from my dream and her name. Hattie Ross! She was my best friend in the dream. I'm an old women with no friends. I decided to Google her name today, the morning i woke from meeting her. Today is August 12, and i found her after dreaming of her the night before her death anniversary. I believe this is proof there is an afterlife. Hattie and i believe, in the Father and His seed, that is the Word we live in. Thank you Hattie Ross for befriending me. I am a lonely old woman, but the Lord fills me with His love and joy and makes life interesting enough to enjoy it. Bea Agle Western New York Hattie Ross, the Lord must love you very much to trust you with this experience upon my life...מלאך

I should have put the wonderful words she spoke to my heart. My life has been very hard the past 10 years and before that, my life was perfect. I'm depressed but my Aba has me in His hand. Ms. Hattie said "Hi Bah. Child things are going to get easier, just keep walking." Then i snapped awake remembering her name, and no one ever said it. I'm still shocked this happened. I'm leaving this site now forever and will never return. To the family of Ms. Hattie... your mom is alive and well, and still working the Lord's will. Goodby... Sha Ahlu Shalom! Mozel Tov. “ Hello Mom,
There's not a day that goes by that I don't think about you! You are so missed and loved. They said, "it would get easier as time passes" but mom, it has been very difficult and hard to adjust to this new normal. I understand life and death more since your passing. I'm trying to be strong like you were when my grandmother passed away in your arms. I don't know how you did it but you did and I will too! Taking it day by day!

Continue resting mom in PEACE.

I love you forever more.....

“ Momma, it's me. I think about you every single day. You are so loved and missed. Your teaching is leading my life and I'm so thankful for all that you've ever done for me. I know you are watching over me at times I can feel your presence. We celebrated your 92nd birthday. Your kids are sticking together just like you taught us. Rest on peacefully momma.

Love Forever

Your daughter,

Regina

“ Good morning Mom:
God has blessed me to see another day. I am trying my best to adjust to the new normal of living my life without your physical body being here but feeling your spirit with me daily. I believe you hear my cry. Mom, I'm doing what you've taught me and that is praying because I believe that God is listening. Most of my days are not good because I've lived my entire life with you til August 12, 2017. On that day mom, God came to take you home. I couldn't help to be angry and mad. Even when I prayed for God to take away those negative feelings somehow they still remained. God is working with me and yes, I am a work in progress. My health isn't the best and I'm fighting every day to get better. Mom, I miss you so so much. I will continue to pray until we meet again. You are the love of my life and I just can't ever let you go!! You are the best mom in the world!

Talk with you later

Love You!

Regina

“ Oh Mom, There's not a day that goes past that I don't think about you. In fact, it's been very difficult for me since you've been gone. My life has changed so drastically and the adjustment of not hearing your voice or seeing you is overwhelming. I can't seem to stay focus or even work. I'm praying that God will help me because I'm just unsure. I want to make you proud but as of now, I just can't seem to get over the thought that you are no longer here with me. Why?

“ Mom, it's me again. I just can't believe that you're not here with me so that I can feel your touch, or hear your joyous voice or witness your powerful prayer. Mom, I pray now more than ever that God will give me the strength to go on. As of today, I am so weak and I'm missing you so much. I will love you forever! Regina
